

- If the program takes an amount of memory that is substantially different from the estimated amount, we may suspect there is a bug in the program.
- We may get charged on the basis of the amount of space (and time) used by our program.